Hay market trade slow and demand light, prices steady. Lots of rain was reported last week with all regions reporting at least something. Everyone hates to wish away rain, especially in late July and early August, but the rain has sure slowed down haying and is making grinding difficult. Unfortunately, reports are coming in that there has been a lot of hay rained on and not a lot of better quality hay to blend with it. All the rain, however, has reduced the impact of the drought on Kansas. According to the US Drought Monitor, with the rain came a contraction of abnormal dryness and moderate to extreme drought across both Kansas and parts of Colorado. Abnormal dryness (D0) increased to 24 pct, moderate drought (D1) decreased to 15 pct, severe drought (D2) decreased to 4 pct, extreme drought (D3) decreased to less than .05 pct. Join agriculture leaders from across the state for the VIRTUAL Kansas Governor's Summit on Agricultural Growth. Starting July 20, we began our online breakout sessions using Zoom, and includes seventeen different agricultural sectors. More information about the Summit, including a link to the registration site, can be found at <https://agriculture.ks.gov/AgGrowthStrategy/ag-summit-2020>.
