Butter manufacturers indicate contractual cream loads are being received, but spot loads of cream are somewhat tighter. Some handlers note fat components in milk output are declining. As of report time, reported cream multiples are moving up from week 29. Butter production schedules vary from steady to lighter. Some butter manufacturers are purchasing less spot cream loads than they were in earlier weeks this month. In a few cases, butter production schedules are lighter, as butter producers are replacing churning equipment. Domestic butter demand varies from steady to lighter. Although a few domestic buyers were offered loads initially intended for international buyers, export demand is generally strong.
